

Kentuckys Herrington Lake Monster

Herrington Lake, one of Kentucky's best known man-made reservoirs, was constructed in the early 1920s to harness the Dix River for hydroelectric power. Now, the author must delve into the secrets above the Dix Dam because some local residents and even some curious tourists believe that its deep dark murky water holds a secret that the locals don't want to admit. For over 40 years, there have been reports of an elusive creature swimming on its surface only to later vanish into its dimly lit lower levels and the underwater caves found there. Is it safe to swim in the water? Does Herrington Lake have a monster that it can call its own? Read and form your own opinion as to whether it really exists.
