

My Body, My Vehicle

One day, as my daughter was staring out the window, she turned and asked me, What happens when we die? Will I feel it? Will it hurt? Will I ever see you again? Is it like when I fall asleep but never wake up? So many questions! How can an eight year old have so many questions about dying? Dying has never been an easy topic to discuss, especially when we are trying to answer the question of what happens when we die. We cant say that we know firsthand how it feels or what its like. All we know is what we want to believe in our hearts. So what do we say to our children when the question is asked? Lots of Ummms are said as our mind races for an answer. I have written this book as a guide on how to explain to our children what happens when you die and to help them understand through analogies. We want them all to understand that yes, you will see your family, pets and dear friends again. On that day, I was shown (like a tv show playing in my head) how to answer that hard-to-explain question What happens when we die?
